

UNSWORTH

VINEYARDS

TASTING NOTES

Vibrant, wild strawberries, and delicate, dried herbs with pronounced minerality. This dry Provençal- styled Rosé is wonderful by itself and loves to be paired with Mediterranean fare.

TERROIR

Regional Terroir

Vancouver Island soils are a complex story of volcanic origin layered with marine sediments and gravel carved and deposited by glaciers. Today, clay-loam soils lay on top of this gravelly base.

Between the 48th and 50th parallel with strong oceanic influence, grape growing on the islands is marked by its long sunshine and cool climate.

The Gulf Islands share a similar climate to Vancouver Island but are often more heavily influenced by the surrounding waters of the Georgia Strait. In this case, mountains to the northeast protect this Salt Spring Island vineyard.

The Fraser River cuts through the massive coastal mountains to form the Fraser Valley with its soils that are alive with organic matter

All of the above combine to create a beautiful and unique coastal expression
